Tech Tip

A common way that computers become infected with viruses is through web browser windows that are set up to trick you into allowing access to your computer. If you see a browser window telling you that your computer has been scanned and/or that viruses have been found, DO NOT click anything within that window, including "OK," "Cancel," or the X at the top of the window. The safest thing to do in this situation is to restart your computer to make sure no dangerous connections are made. Click here for more information.

Dear [member_name_first],

Greetings from 3n1media! We hope your web-based adventures are going well. This month, we wanted to give you an update on SocialConnect, a new feature we have developed for our new and improved content management system, which will be available to all of you within the next month. SocialConnect allows you to seamlessly update your social networking profiles with links to your website's content directly from the content management system.

Here's how it works:

Say you just posted a new blog entry to your website. You think to yourself, "I bet I could get more traffic if I could link visitors to my blog page from Facebook and Twitter." So, before you even navigate away from the blog entry's detail page, you click on a button labeled Social, and this box appears:

First of all, you decide you want to post a short teaser to get people interested in your blog post, so you type that up in the To Post field. Secondly, you want to include a link to the blog page, so you click the Insert Link button, which adds a link to the To Post field. "But what happens if the link's long URL puts me over my character limit for my status update?" you may ask. No problem; all you have to do is click the Make Tiny button, which will shorten your link's URL, giving you more space for your description text. You then select both Facebook Status and Twitter and click Post Item to instantaneously update both accounts, giving your blog page immediate visibility to your Facebook friends and Twitter followers.

And SocialConnect is not limited to blog entries; you can use it to update your social media with links to any of your website's pages, including those containing store items, news articles, tour dates, etc.

Social networking sites like Facebook and Twitter are all the rage in online marketing these days. And it makes sense; why wouldn't you want to take advantage of a free and easy method of reaching people with your brand and driving traffic to your website? So we are excited to be able to offer

SocialConnect as a new way to seamlessly integrate your website's content with the powerful avenues of social networking. We hope you find it helpful and fun to use. Feel free to contact us if you have any questions.

Thanks,

Sean Wright
